If the Bond Bank exercises its right to terminate this Agreement, the Bond Bank shall immediately terminate the notional amount of Motor Fuel allocable to the Qualified Entity in the Swap Agreement.

11. Counterparts. This Agreement may be executed in one or more counterparts, any of which shall be regarded for all purposes as an original and all of which constitute but one and the same instrument. The Bond Bank and the Qualified Entity each agree that they will execute any and all documents or other instruments, and take such other actions as may be necessary to give effect to the terms of this Agreement.

12. Waiver. No waiver by either the Bond Bank or the Qualified Entity of any term or condition of this Agreement shall be deemed or construed as a waiver of any other terms or conditions, nor shall a waiver of any breach be deemed to constitute a waiver of any subsequent breach, whether of the same or of a different section, subsection, paragraph, clause, phrase or other provision of this Agreement.

RISK FACTORS

Market Risk: The risk that commodity prices stay low such that the QEs and the Bond Bank would have been better off by not hedging. However, because the program's goal is to minimize large budget variances resulting from the volatility of fuel prices, this should be an acceptable risk as the hedges provide protection against a certain rise in prices.

Basis Risk: The risk that there is a mismatch between the spot prices the QEs pay at the local market and the index prices referenced under the hedge agreements. Such basis risk should be mitigated by ensuring that there is a strong correlation between the hedge index prices and the prices in the local market.

Counterparty Risk: The risk that the hedge provider fails to perform under the hedge agreement, which could leave the QEs exposed to higher prices. Counterparty risk is smaller for shorter-term transactions and greater for longer-term transactions. Counterparty risk can be mitigated by using highly rated hedge providers.

Termination Risk: The risk that there is an early termination of the hedging agreement, which could result in the Bond Bank either receiving or making an early termination payment. Early terminations are usually caused by an event of default or bankruptcy. Termination risk can be mitigated by choosing highly rated hedge providers that have an established record of performance in the relevant hedging market. (Note that the Bond Bank could never owe an early termination payment in a cap transaction, since all obligations are paid for upfront and the cap can never have a negative value.)

Consumption Demand Risk: The risk that the actual consumption of fuel is different than the planned amount specified under the hedge agreement. If actual consumption is less than the hedged quantities, the QEs and the Bond Bank could be in an "over-hedged" position. Likewise, if actual consumption is far greater than the quantities specified in hedge, the Bond Bank would have exposure on those excess amounts. Generally speaking, we believe it is prudent to hedge less than 100% of expected consumption.
